Thank you for your interest in supporting your local domestic violence organization and the survivors that they serve!

Connecticut Coalition Against Domestic Violence (CCADV) has 18 member domestic violence organizations providing critical direct services to victims and survivors across the state. The services that our members provide include counseling, court advocacy, support groups, child advocacy, safety planning, assistance obtaining basic needs, community education, emergency shelter, and transitional housing options, among others. All of these services are confidential, safe and free of charge.

Each year, nearly 40,000 survivors and children are served across the state through our 18 member organizations. These women, men and their children come to us seeking safety and the same thing that we all deserve - the ability to live a life free from violence. Our members cannot do this important work without the support of people like you.

You may choose to donate financially, either through cash donations, legacy giving, or purchasing essential items needed by survivors. Or you may choose to give of your time through volunteerism. Some common examples of volunteer duties include direct services (e.g., support group co-facilitator, victim and court advocacy, transportation, or answering the hotline, all of which require certification training) or non-direct services (e.g., assisting with fundraising or tabling events, office administrative duties, serving on a committee, etc.). Either way, your time or financial support has a tremendous impact on services and our members’ ability to meet the needs of survivors and their children.

October marks Domestic Violence Awareness Month (DVAM). What began in 1981 as a “Day of Unity” has evolved into a nationwide month of action that celebrates survivors and raises awareness not only about the issue, but also about the services available to help victims and survivors be safer. This guide also highlights some of the DVAM events being held across the state in October 2021. Be sure to connect with your local domestic violence organization on social media to stay up-to-date on events!

We hope that you find this guide useful and will be able to support your local CCADV member organization. People just like you, helping in ways both large and small, provide the energy and creativity to push this work forward, bringing hope and healing to survivors and their children. Again, thank you!

Volunteering -

Direct service volunteers work directly with clients through victim services. Possible tasks include working in the safe houses, answering the hotline, and facilitating support groups. Direct service volunteers are required to complete a 20-hour certification training.

Indirect service volunteers help with a wide variety of projects and initiatives including fundraising events, holiday program support, community projects, and outreach.

For more information, please contact Anita Lai, Volunteer Coordinator, at alai@dvccct.org.

Wish List Summary -

Many of our clients and their families are starting over in new housing. You can help make their “fresh start” feel a little less daunting by providing some essentials to our victims in a “move-in basket!”

Volunteering -
Volunteers play a vital role to the work we do at The Center for Family Justice (CFJ) and are part of a collaborative effort to bring hope and healing to adults and children impacted by domestic and sexual violence and child abuse.

CFJ has two levels of volunteerism - 1) certified volunteers who complete a 40-hour training course and then have direct, one-one-one contact with clients and 2) non-certified volunteers who may assist with fundraisers, participating on committees, helping with administrative tasks, and more.

To learn more, visit - https://centerforfamilyjustice.org/make-difference/volunteer-internships/ or contact Beth Fitzpatrick at BFitzpatrick@CenterforFamilyJustice.org.

Wish List Summary -
Some of the goods needed include:
- New clothing (adult & child, all sizes)
- Gift cards
- New bedding (twin)
- Diapers & pull ups
- Non-perishable foods
- Cleaning supplies
- Personal care items (adult & child, all genders)
- Towels

For more information, visit - https://centerforfamilyjustice.org/make-difference/donate/kind-giving/.

Donations -
Your gift to The Center for Family Justice helps ensure that CFJ can provide necessary services to clients impacted by domestic and sexual violence and child abuse. Your gift of $25 supports one hour of prevention education at a local school; $50 provides support group meetings; $100 provides a night in a hotel when the safe house is full; and $250 provides an hour of legal counsel.

Host a Third-Party Event -
Many supporters have given us a big financial boost by sponsoring their own events, staging everything from a dog walking party or fitness party to a cocktail party for 80 or a fancy sit-down dinner. The idea is to do something entertaining you might have done anyway, such as a pool party, a movie party or an evening of bridge, and ask your friends to write a check to CFJ. For more information about third-party events, contact Lisa Labella at llabella@CenterForFamilyJustice.org or call (203) 334-6154 ext. 121.
